"It wouldn't be a murder without Edna."

For the better part of two decades, Edna Buchanan covered the often-surreal police beat for the Miami Herald, becoming an ever-present figure among the police force and winning a Pulitzer Prize along the way. Now she is the author of sixteen mystery novels and true-crime books, picking up recognition left and right for her engaging, fast-paced style and inimitable presence. Her latest, Shadows, pits a historic preservationist against scheming developers and revolves around a peculiar old house located on Miami's sultry Biscayne Bay, topped off with the kind of jolting cold case murder mystery that Edna is so fond of—and good at—serving up.
